Everywhere you go, you hear about the wonderful work FOCUS missionaries are doing and how effective their peer ministry to young people is. I think one of the wonderful things is the sea of vocations that have come out of FOCUS. I have a retreat every year for university students centered on vocation discernment. So many of the participants come through FOCUS groups, and out of that retreat come most of our vocations for the seminary.

The commitment to prayer is what I believe permeates every single thing that FOCUS does. That's a really big gift. When it comes to how to evangelize, share the Gospel, present the message of Christianity, and lead Bible studies, [their national conference] is oriented towards [students] using these tools.
